

Mass Collaboration as the Public's Response to a Proprietary Regime

Shun-ling Chen

Harvard Law School, Cambridge, MA

A background discussion about how professionalism became strongly associated with authorship in copyright law, how "public interest" has served as a pretext to support a proprietary regime, and how mass collaboration projects help the (lay) public to redefine it.